The Edmonton Exhibition

This year on August 23, 24, 25 and 26, the Edmonton Exhibition Association, Ltd., will hold its annual Stock Show and Race Meet at which over $30,000 will be distributed in prizes, purses and attractions.

The Exhibition will be held on the new grounds acquired through the City of Edmonton, consisting of 147 acres of land, about 80 of which are being devoted entirely to exhibition purposes. On these grounds modern stock buildings have been erected, a grand stand which will accommodate 5000 people, besides poultry and dog, dairy and horticultural buildings, race stables, etc., and an up to date half mile standard race track, the total expenditure on grounds and buildings exceeding $175,000. Another $200,000 will be expended on exhibition buildings before 1912, when the Provincial Exhibition complete in all departments will be held in Edmonton. One feature of the 1912 Exhibition will be the running of the first Edmonton Futurity for three year old trotters and pacers for which a stake of $3,000 has been guaranteed. A similar Futurity has been guaranteed to be run in 1913, guaranteed value of which is $3,500. Entries for both of these stakes close on September 1st. The Edmonton Derby for three year old running horses, value $1,000, will also be run in 1913, entries to close on November 1st. About sixty entries have already been received for the Futurities for harness horses, and by September 1st it is expected that this number will be increased to one hundred.

Besides encouraging the breeding of racing stock, the Edmonton Association have also taken steps to promote breeding along the other lines by forming the Alberta Provincial Horse, Cattle, Sheep and Swine Breeders' Associations having their headquarters and registered office in Edmonton.

Important to Stockmen

The farmer or rancher who wishes to enlarge or improve his herd by securing some of the well bred stuff now being put on the market because of the crowding out of the big ranchers, will upon application to the Live Stock Commissioner at Edmonton, be put in touch with parties who are offering their stock for sale. Several ranchers have already given notice of their intention to reduce the size of their herds or sell out entirely.

Most of the herds reported are of the Shorthorn or Herford breeding or are crosses of these breeds. Practically all are bred for beef production, and being range bred are much better able to take care of themselves than are the farm bred animals that find their way out here from the east.

These animals will be of little use to dairymen.

Address all enquiries to W. F. Stevens, Live Stock Commissioner, in care of the Department of Agriculture, Edmonton.

Negro is Champion

Reno, Nev., July 4.—John Arthur Johnson, a Texas negro, the son of an American slave, tonight is the undisputed champion heavyweight pugilist of the world. Jas. Jeffries of California, winner of twenty-one championship fights, the man who had never been brought to his knees by a blow, tonight passed into history as a broken idol. He met utter defeat at the hands of the black champion.

The vital spark was not there. Jim Jeffries, only the empty shell of the great fighter of seven years ago, was whipped by Jack Johnson this afternoon before the most remarkable assemblage of sporting men ever gathered together in the history of the game. Johnson not only outclassed Jeff but actually played with the big white man as he played with little Tommy Burns and Stanley Ketchel.

Johnson proved himself Jeff's master at every stage of the battle. Even the great test of strength that was looked for seemed to be in Johnson's favor. In the early rounds with the pressure of his right glove he twisted Jeff's left arm almost into the hammerlock position to prevent the big fellow using it while breaking.

As the rounds went on and Johnson's confidence came to him he took all kinds of liberties with Jeff. As a rule Johnson whips his men with his right uppercut. He used it a few times today but it was left hooks and left uppercuts while clinching that brought Jeffries to terms. In this kind of fighting Jeff was powerless after a few rounds had passed. He could not devise a way to escape punishment while they were feinting and swinging at close quarters. It seemed the easiest thing in the world for Johnson to free his left arm and tilt the big fellow's head.

First of all blood came from Jeff's mouth and then his right eye closed. His nose poured blood. After the sixth round the battle had a decidedly Johnson flavor. Jeff got in a few body blows while going into a clinch but he was slowly chopped to pieces and all of Johnson's best tricks were put in on Jeff when they were coming together. In the fifteenth round Jeff was knocked down three times with left hooks delivered by Johnson while standing away. Sam Berger was entering the ring on the occasion of the last knock-down to acknowledge defeat and hoped to thus save Jeff from being knocked out, but in the meantime Jeff was declared out. Owing to Berger's interference the victory would be counted as a knockout anyway.

Irrigation Convention

Irrigation is the handmaiden of agriculture, and the history of the first is coeval with that of the second. In the cradle of the race the success of crops was absolutely dependent upon water supply, and throughout Asia Minor, India, Egypt and China there are still in existence remains of irrigation works which by their size and workmanship bear mute testimony to the importance of irrigation to the long forgotten builders. Canals, in length, breadth and depth, larger by far than any yet dreamed of by modern engineers; storage basins which rival some of the great lakes; stone aqueducts which would bear the weight of a couple of modern railway trains running on a double tracked road, existed in all these countries. Even the great dam at Assuan had a rival in that which occupied virtually the same position in prehistoric times. In more recent times the art spread to Italy, Spain and North Africa, or rather from North Africa to Spain and thence to Italy. It was the Spanish monks, those devoted soldiers of the Cross, who accompanied the Spanish armies of conquest on even their bloodiest campaigns, who first introduced the art of irrigation into the New World, and from the small works which they constructed wherever they erected an altar, the work has spread all over the arid and semi-arid districts of the two Americas. Even yet the work is still in its infancy, and local conditions have so far been the only ones considered. The result has been the wasteful distribution from the more easily controlled sources and the ignoring of those larger sources which could be utilized for the irrigation of huge stretches of country. During the past few years, however, governments have become interested in what was hitherto a proposition for the individual, and capital has begun to recognize that money invested in irrigation projects will give good returns.

The increase of interest and activity in irrigation has given rise to many vexed questions, and it is only by the interchange of views between those who are interested in the subject or have studied these questions from the practical, the engineering or the legal standpoint, that any final system of control, administration and distribution of the available water supply can be arranged.

This is the object which the promoters of the Western Canada Irrigation Association had in view when they met four years ago for the purpose of organizing, and this is the object of the meeting which will be held in Kamloops, B. C., on August 3rd, 4th and 5th of this year.

It is hoped that the residents of all parts of the province will be sufficiently interested in the subject of irrigation to have delegates present, and that in the Dry Belt all those who must perforce take a more intimate interest will turn up whether delegates or not. The program, which it is hoped will be carried out in full, includes papers by Mr. Newell, chief of the reclamation department of the United States; Clifford Sifton, M. P., an enthusiastic advocate of conservation; R. B. Bennett, of Calgary, and Charles Wilson, K. C., both of whom are experts on the legal questions connected with irrigation, and A. E. Ashcroft, of Vernon, and A. E. Meighen, of Kamloops, on the practical side as concerned with company projects. Other recognized experts on different branches of the subject will also be asked to prepare papers for submission to the convention, and the discussion on all these papers cannot but result in benefit to the cause.

Resolutions may be brought before the convention, and it is requested that proposed resolutions should be mailed to J. T. Hall, Secretary Western Canada Irrigation Convention, Brandon, Manitoba, before July 20th.

The people of Kamloops are particularly interested in the subject of irrigation, and will spare no effort to make the convention a success so far as lies in their power.

England's Puritanic Queen

Austerity of life, piety of mind and an extreme absorption in the prosaic details of wifehood and motherhood are so characteristic of her majesty, Queen Mary, consort of George V., that all the society organs in Europe predict something of that revival of Puritanism at the English court which made the cult of the family so characteristic of the early Victorian era.

The revolution at the court of St. James has, in truth, already begun, and many of the flippant percoresses who ornamented the last reign have gone into obscurity. Fashions, it is announced, are to be serious and sober. Presentation at court will henceforth entail much elimination of ladies with a past. Religion will again become important. Manners will cease to be free and easy. Bishops will be more in evidence and jockeys less encouraged. Heroines of the divorce court and the music hall are to be taboo.

More important than all other details combined is the evident fact, as the Paris Figaro deems it, that the will of the queen, instead of the personal preferences of the king, is to determine the social recognition and standing accorded the ladies and gentlemen making up what is called society. Smartness has lost the importance it had while Edward reigned, and impeccable respectability has attained a value it seemed altogether to have lost while the late sovereign held sway. Birth and blood are not to be disregarded, but they are to count only when re-enforced by virtue of the domestic description.—Current Literature for July.

Storyettes

TWO young ladies were talking the other day about a third who had just become engaged to a widower who played the cornet and had four children. "What could be worse," exclaimed one, "than four children and a cornet?" "No thing," said the other, "excepting, perhaps, six children and a trombone."

JOHN WY, said the boy's mother, "I hope you have been a nice, quiet boy at school this afternoon." "That's what I was," answered Johnny. "I went to sleep right after dinner, and the teacher said she'd whip any boy in the room who waked me up."

AFTER a marriage recently the bride at party partook of a sumptuous breakfast, towards the end of which a younger brother of the bride got up and said, solemnly, raising his glass—

"Ladies and gentlemen, I have to propose a toast, which, however, must be drunk standing. Please take your glasses and rise up."

The guests, although somewhat bewildered, did so.

"Now," said the young neophyte, "if you will remain standing for a few minutes I'll find him who has been sitting on my new hat."

IT took the proprietor of a department store on Main street the other day every ounce of will-power he possessed to keep from laughing outright at an old lady from the country who came to his establishment and began examining some pieces of cheap calico.

She peered at one piece first this way then that, wetting it and rubbing it with her fingers to try if the colors were fast. Then she peered awhile, as if not yet satisfied. At last she cut off a piece with a pair of scissors, and handing it to a gawky-looking girl of about sixteen standing by her side, said—

"Here, Liza Jane, you chew that an see if it fades."

Liza Jane raised it to her mouth and solemnly went to work.

A WOMAN looked in at the photographer's the other afternoon. "I have no fault to find with myself and children in the family group you took of us," she began, "but my husband is a complete failure. He looks more like a chimpanzee than anything else, and after all the instructions I gave him as to the correct pose and expression. Why, none of his friends recognized him."

"Madam," replied the knight of the camera, blandly, "I scented trouble with your husband from the first. You know how I begged and entreated, nay, pleaded with him to look natural."

"That's just it," retorted the partially dishevelled one, "that's what caused the mischief."

A GAMEKEEPER found a boy fishing in his master's private waters.

"You mustn't fish here," he exclaimed. "These waters belong to the Earl of A—"

"Do they? I didn't know that," replied the culprit; and, laying aside his rod, he took up a book and commenced reading.

The keeper departed, but on returning about an hour afterwards he found the same youth had started fishing again.

"Do you understand that this water belongs to the Earl of A—?" he roared.

"Why, you told me that an hour ago!" exclaimed the angler, in surprise. "Surely the whole river don't belong to him? His share went by long ago!"

A REPORTER recently took a journey of considerable length for the purpose of interviewing a rising literary light as to his next novel.

On reaching the house he discovered the author seated in his garden engaged in earnest conversation with a little boy who had a large towel pinned around his neck. The author received his visitor cordially, but seemed rather absent-minded.

"Are you willing to tell me a little about your next important work?" asked the reporter.

The literary man clicked a pair of shears and patted the boy on the shoulder.

"We were just talking about it as you came up," he said. "I will think I ought to do it with a bow, but I think I can do it without. What would you advise? You see, his mother has always cut it before, but she's away just now!"

A MAN who had literary aspirations, but lacked the literary instinct, took to the editor of a magazine.

"I want you to read it over carefully," he said. "It's intended for a satire, and, though I say it myself, it's pretty clever."

The editor took the manuscript and began to read it. A page or two sufficed to satisfy him of the utter hopelessness for purpose of publication, but he hesitated to crush a budding author, and proceeded to temporize.

"Why, Mr.—Simmons," he said, "your story has some crudities of style, of course, and—"

"It's better as you got into it," interrupted the other, complacently. "It's like some of Thackeray's."

"Ah, you do so remind me somewhat of Thackeray!"

"Do I?"

"Yes," rejoined the editor, returning him the manuscript. "You have a nose just like his!"

THE WEST OF THE OLD-TIMER

A WRITER who toured the plains by backboard in the old range days of 1881 well depicts the cowboy days that came before the railway came and the wire fence. Speaking of the country round about Calgary, some of it the irrigation belt now being invaded by American farmers, he says:

"On the ranch they have now about 2000 head of cattle, including 25 good bulls. It is intended, however, by the end of October, to bring the herd up to 2500. The cost of Montana and Oregon cattle (the kinds brought in here) is about $25 per head, as the transport from Montana is rather slow and expensive, the average day's march being only about ten miles. There are three kinds of bulls employed on this ranch, Shorthorns, Herefords and Polled Angus. There is plenty of timber easily available, but as yet nothing worth mentioning has been done in the way of building securing laborers and mechanics. There is plenty of room for farm laborers in this country. Good hands' cowboys receive 40 per month and board, and halfbreeds from $25 to $40 with board, of course.

"My breed men of little use here until they have learned to rough it and 'got into the ways of the country,' but for farmers' sons and energetic farm laborers the opening is an excellent one. The sort of life they lead here is very different from that of farm laborers in Ontario. A great deal is done here on horseback.

"It is unwise to go near a herd of Montana or Oregon cattle on foot, and those who have had the most experience with them will always be the last to venture in doing so, as the danger of being trampled to death merely to satisfy the curiosity of the cattle is altogether too great. There are also stallions of various breeds. They also intend to put large numbers of sheep in the range. At this point in the cattle range, Mr. MacGregor asked one of the gentlemen what he thought of the agricultural capabilities of the Bow River country. His reply was particularly nique in its character. He said: 'There is plenty of excellent agricultural land'—his companion here gave him a very peculiar glance, and he finished the sentence by adding: 'five or six hundred miles from here.'"

Liza Jane raised it to her mouth and solemnly went to work.

"During the afternoon there had been several rain storms and snow squalls, and the weather was very disagreeable. The rain threatened once or twice with rain, but just before sunset the sky cleared in the western horizon, and the warm sunlight peering through the cloudy masses and dark, sultry ravines made them seem up curious little puffs of vapor, that, curling over some of the sharp, conical peaks, were singularly suggestive of a smoking volcano, while others floating higher in the clear sky and catching the slanting sunbeams, looked like little islands of fire floating in a translucent sea of blue and gold. As the sun sank lower the heavy curtain of rain cloud that still hung over this bright horizon caught the declining sunlight; first its festooned edges were fringed with gold, and swiftly its great curling folds changed from leaden blue to duna and buff and from that to rich gold and bronze, and as the sun sank still lower they grew brighter and brighter till away up almost to the zenith the great cloud curtain was all again he enlarges the splendid scenery of that part of the West:

shone with orange and crimson. The sun was now hidden behind a great pyramidal mountain, but a misty plume hanging from its peak and trailing down its northern slope caught the sunset splendor and looked like a fiery volume of lava pouring down its dark shadowy side. Still, though the now peaks were edged with fire, all below was in deep shadow and above in a dark thin vapor of purple and blue, while the inky storm clouds in the east drifted about in threatening billowy masses, with here and there a rift revealing a dark old sky of intense steel blue."

THE BUCK-EYE

-VOL. 1

WEEKLY EDITION

NO. 33

Get the Best and You Get a Buck-Eye

It costs no more to smoke a good cigar than a bad one.

It's simply a matter of testing out individual makes until you come to the one that most nearly approximates to your idea of a perfect smoke.

Then you cease your investigations, tie right up to that particular brand, and smoke it for the rest of your natural life.

You will recognize it when you come to it by its mild, delicious, fragrant and satisfying flavor, by its perfect shape and color, and by the scarlet label on the box, bearing in its centre the word "BUCK-EYE."

It would be a foolish waste of time and money for us to go on impressing on you the superiority of THE BUCK-EYE if the cigar wouldn't stand the test.

No amount of advertising reaches even the dignity of a flash-in-the-pan, that hasn't got the goods behind it.

We have the goods!

You needn't take our word for it.

Ask any one of the hundreds of thousands throughout Western Canada that regularly ask for and insist on getting the BUCK-EYE.

Or, better still, go to it yourself and ask for

The Best Ten Cent Cigar in the Market---and You'll Get the BUCK-EYE

THE LION-ROPER AT WORK

It is some weeks since my American friend Scull told me that he was going to British East Africa to help "rope lions." I believe Scull to be capable of any adventure, for I have known him under many conditions and in many lands. And when I had seen Buffalo Jones and had recovered from his friendly handshake, I believed in the lion-roper with whose marvelous exploits every schoolboy in the United States is familiar. The other day I received a letter from my old comrade. It is written in pencil and dated from Soda Swamp Camp, British East Africa, and informs me that Buffalo Jones and his cowboys have begun with a rhinoceros. Here is the letter.

—William Maxwell

Soda Swamp Camp,
British East Africa

Somehow everything seems to happen as "moving" day with the Buffalo Jones expedition here in East Africa, and yesterday was no exception to the rule. What occurred on the other "moving" days has no place in this story, but on this particular occasion we met our first rhinoceros—a big bull—and the colonel and the cowboys roped him and fought him for five hours in the last sunlight before he was beaten.

It was a little—a very little—like playing a large fish on a light line. In the beginning the rhino dragged the horses all about, even though the horses planted their four feet firmly on the ground, as they are trained to do with cattle; but in the end the horses dragged the rhino—dragged him up to a clump of trees, where the cowboys tied him, properly leeked, with all the ropes at hand.

We were shifting camp from Webbs Farm to the Soda Swamp, about twelve miles distant, when Colonel Jones, who

The chase had strung out considerably, for the horses with the cameras had to carry the men and the cameras, too, and they had been chosen more for strength than speed. Behind these again came the negro porters with the extra film boxes and tripods.

While the chase was coming up the rhino kept the horsemen busy. Time after time he came plunging out of the water to charge the nearest assailant, and the horsemen had to ride hard to escape. There were many close calls and the ground was bad with ant-bear holes, so that a fall would bring disaster; but the rhino's continual charging had nevertheless to be encouraged to help, however little, to wear the animal out.

Then a chance came to throw a rope. Means, with a quick turn, caught the rhino round the neck, and the horse fell back on his haunches to hold fast, but the rope parted and the beast was free once more.

At the next attempt Loveless caught him by one of his hind legs, and the rhino decided to shift his base of operations to an anti-hill in the adjacent clearing. His mode of progression was to walk on three legs and to drag Loveless' horse after him with the other. He reached the anti-hill and demolished it, and paused for a breathing spell.

Here the cameras caught up with the chase. Cherry Kearton went into action on the north, Gobbett on the south, near a small thorn tree, with a negro porter beside him. The rhino saw Gobbett's camera and charged. The porter went up the tree like a flash, but the rhino was so small there was not room for him, and Gobbett was compelled to abandon his camera and retreat. With an upward stroke of his horn the rhino sent the apparatus flying. Then Means succeeded in attracting his attention, and had gone out scouting, by the way, finished a big rhino in the bottom of the next valley to the west.

No sooner had this news reached the trekking staff than the rest of the expedition, including the two cowboys, Loveless and Means, and Kearton and Gobbett with the moving picture camera, started on a wide detour of some four or five miles to approach the beast from down the wind.

When we found the colonel he was dismounted and well concealed behind some scrub, keeping watch on the rhino, who was lying down about three hundred yards beyond. There followed a short, whispered conference while girls were tightened and ropes shaken loose. That a hard fight was coming was evident enough, and Kearton crept forward with foot with his apparatus to catch the beginning of the show. It was then one o'clock in the afternoon, the sky was cloudless, and the sunshine was hot in the bottom of the valley.

At the whir of the camera the great beast rose up on his short legs and tossed his head and snuffed the air and snorted. Then with surprising quickness he wheeled and broke away south, down the scrub-grown valley. At once the colonel and the boys were after him on the run, and the camera department lumbered up in a hurry and came thundering along behind.

For a good three miles the rhino never paused. Then he came into more open country, dotted here and there with small thorn trees. In one place there was a fair-sized pool of water left over from the rains of the night before. Into the water the rhino plunged and, stopping, faced the horsemen.

MAGIC BAKING POWDER

Does not contain Alum

ALUM is put into inferior baking powders because it is cheap. You cannot detect it, because all baking powders look alike. Alum is a dangerous mineral acid condemned by food experts as unfit for use in any food preparation, because it works havoc with the stomach and digestive organs and causes certain harm to the entire system.

Your baking results will be the best with MAGIC and you have the certain knowledge that your bread, biscuits and pastry will be light, healthful and delicious.

There is no substitute for MAGIC and it is a medium priced baking powder and the only well-known one made in Canada that does NOT contain alum.

FABRIC NAMES

THERE is hardly a fabric but derives its name from some city or country, and all ages as well as the four quarters of the globe are represented.

Muslin is named from Mosul, a city on the banks of the Tigris, in Asia.

Cambrie is from Cambrai, a city in France.

Gauze is probably from Gaza, in Syria, though possibly from the Hindoo gauze, meaning thin cloth.

Baize, which we commonly think of as green, was named from its original color, a reddish-brown. The word is really the plural of bay, and the color is that of the horse, which is known by that name. A form of the word is common to many tongues.

Damask is readily seen to be from the city of Damascus, in Syria.

Silk and serge are both from the Latin sers, meaning the Chinese. These fabrics first came from that portion of Asia which is now Southern China.

Velvet is from the Italian velluto, meaning woolly; this from the Latin vellus, a fleece. Velum is a derivative of the same root—a pelt or hide.

Bandanna is from the Indian word meaning to bind or tie, and refers to the manner of tying knots in the fabric to prevent the dye from reaching every part.

In this way spots are left white, and a rude pattern remains in the cloth.

Alpaca comes from the animal of the same name, in Peru. It is of the llama species, and its wool is used to make the fabric used for the making of summer garments.

Calico first came from Calicut, a town in India, which was once celebrated for its cotton cloth.

Editorial Notes

While a great many people deplore prize fighting and would like to see it stopped, yet there are few indeed who do not take considerable interest in a big prize fight once it becomes certain that one is to take place. The fight between Johnson and Jeffries for the heavyweight championship of the world on July 4, without question excited the greatest amount of interest ever taken in such an event, and there is no room for doubt that the great majority of white people the world over would have preferred to see Jeffries win. The information that had been sent out from time to time from the training camp, gave everyone good reason to believe that Jeffries was in condition to win, but the result shows that he was a long way from being back to his old fighting form, and the consensus of opinion now is that a pugilist can not come back to his old fighting form after a lapse of several years.

In the light of history it is evident that much advance misfortune was given out about the 'big prize fight. It was stated many times that Jeffries was even better than in the old days, when in fact he was far from being as good. It was repeatedly stated that Johnson could not hit hard. Ask Jeff or anybody who saw the fight how this hitting business panned out. It was a stock phrase that Johnson's biggest asset was a mammoth "yellow streak." Did anybody see him run?

Immediately on the announcement of the result of the fight race riots broke out in various parts of the United States, mostly in cities where there is a large negro population. It has also awakened a feeling of unrest in other parts of the world where there is a more or less unwilling submission to domination by the white race. The prediction is also made that the United States will find the troubles of the race problem very much increased by the negro's victory.

The purchasers of the moving pictures of the fight are having troubles of their own these days. The authorities in many of the large cities have announced that they will not permit the showing of the fight pictures for fear of inciting race riots. In many other cities the pictures are to be suppressed on moral grounds.

Local and General

An exciting runaway occurred in town Tuesday. A team hitched to heavy wagon started to run when near the hotel and tore northward on Railway avenue at a terrific clip. They attempted to turn to the west at Ontkes' livery barn, but the impetus was so great that a clear turn was impossible, and with a great leap the team landed square on top of a top buggy standing near the barn and in a flash reduced it to kindling and scrap iron. One horse went down and was tangled up in the wreckage, and the runaway stopped right there. The horses were a little bruised and scratched but not seriously injured.

The fair at Calgary was the best in several respects that has yet been held there. The live stock exhibits were the best and largest ever made in the west. The exhibits in the district competition were all good and the entries were numerous enough to make the competition keen. The acre yield competition was one of the big drawing cards of the fair. The big piles of splendid grain extending in a double row from one end of the long building to the other, told the story of Alberta's marvellous adaptability to grain raising more eloquently and more convincingly than could words. The amusements and other features of the fair were all up to the mark, and the attendance was a record breaker.

For Western Canada's Great Industrial Fair at Winnipeg, Man., July 13 to 23, 1910, the Canadian Pacific Railway Company will have in effect special rates. For full particulars as to rates, limits, etc., apply to nearest Canadian Pacific Ticket Agent.

Crossfield district was right to the front at the Calgary fair. Among the winners in pure bred horses we note Stooke & Amery, and R. Reid.
